FADE IN:

A and B are in a contest to gross each other out with outrageous recipes from "competing" cookbooks.

B

(reads from a recipe webpage)

"Chopped peanuts bring exciting contrast to this popular macaroni dish. Macaroni. Onions. Green Pepper. Salad Oil. Ground Beef. Tomato Soup. Evaporated Milk. Cheddar Cheese. Worcestershire Sauce. And peanuts."

A

(checks the website's title)

American Cooking. Is this what the rest of the world thinks American food is like? I think I know why the French hate us.

B

Hey. Ease up. Future French Minor here.

A

Oooh. Sor-ry, Monsieur Macron.

B

(a blank look suggests B has no idea who Macron is)

We learned how to talk about school today.

A

Huh?

B

Madame asked us what classes we were taking. You know, like "Do you have an English class?"

A

Okay. "Do you have an English class?"

B

Yes.

A

No. I mean, in French.

B

Oh.

(clears throat).

Oui.

A

Well there's a well-spent tuition dollar.

B

She didn't ask me if I had an English class. She never asks me the stuff I know.

A

You put that on Rate My Professor?

B

She asked me if I had a P.E. class.

A

What did you say?

B

Nothing. I didn't understand the question.

A

Oh.

B

(another cookbook discovery)

Wait. Look! Pineapple Upside Down Beans!

B

Okay, you have a death wish.
