

A
You guys might be too young for this, but... Do you guys, um, remember the old... like- little snippets of cartoons for like, health?

B Bumpers.

A Huh?

B
They're called bumpers.

A
Bumpers, yeah. And there was the one where it was, "GINGIVITIS!" Do you remember that one? It was like this dude, like, in a cape and they're like, "Well, what are you gonna go fight?" And he's like
"GINGIVITIS."

C
Like the "Around the Corner" song!

A The What?

C
The "Around the Corner" song! Did you ever watch that?

B
That was like the one they played... in like Walgreen's commercials?

C
It was like Sex Ed in Middle...

C
No, it was Sex Ed in Middle School.

B (aside) "Down on the corner...
out in the streets..."

C No, AROUND... "AROUND THE CORNER."

C
But, Ugh. I don't... I can't even remember how it went, but it was awful. I remember, like, every single kid in my sex ed class was mortified... because they made a song about puberty.

B
Oof, yeah... a bit rough...

C

Yeah, let's take a whole bunch of preteens that are hormonally exploding and make a song about their experience right now and see how bad they cringe.

B

Well, you know cause somebody in an HR department thought, "Yeah, this is fine."

A

"I know what we'll do..."

A AND B (unison)

"...We'll put a song behind it!"

C

"Let's make a song about how you're getting pubes!"

A

At least, they should've had somebody cool do it...like Weird Al! Like that would have been more fun!

C

Oh, no... it was, the most... like... Heteronormative white people singing it... Like, (fanciful) "your body is changing..." It was awful...AWFUL.

B

It's got like... "Rappin' for Jesus" vibes.

A

Yeah.

C

Kinda, but not nearly as funny.
